As demand for complementary and alternative medicine increases, so do opportunities for practitioners of Chinese medicine. In addition to establishing their own clinics, AOMA graduates are practicing in hospitals, doctor’s offices, and as part of integrative care teams. AOMA’s comprehensive clinical education prepares students for practice at the forefront of integrative medicine.

AOMA Intern Clinic– North

AOMA students begin their clinical education at the busy intern clinic in North Austin. For the last five years, AOMA has maintained at least a 90% appointment fill rate in all of its clinics providing students ample opportunities to work with challenging cases and a diverse patient base.

AOMA’s Intern Clinic– South

AOMA maintains an intern clinic focused on Chinese medical healthcare on its campus in South Austin. In all of our clinics, AOMA Student interns have the opportunity to learn from members of our distinguished faculty, whose diverse specialties range from the application of particular acupuncture techniques to care for pain, psycho-emotional issues, and addiction, to the formulation of Chinese herbs to treat chronic disease.

Seton McCarthy Community Health Center

This member of the Seton Family of Hospitals was established in 1989 and provides comprehensive health services to medically underserved families in Austin including primary care services, preventative care, and health education at a sliding fee scale. Student interns offer acupuncture services to patients referred to them by Seton doctors and participate in this collaborative healthcare environment.

People’s Community Clinic

This free-of-charge acupuncture clinic is located within the western medical facilities of People’s Community Clinic, the largest provider of medical services to Austin’s uninsured and underserved populations. AOMA student interns treat patients referred to them by the medical doctors at People’s.

Seton Topfer Community Clinic

Also a member of the Seton Family of Hospitals, this north Austin community clinic offers affordable healthcare services to a primarily Spanish-speaking community. Student interns offer acupuncture and Chinese herbs to patients referred to them by Seton doctors. AOMA’s community clinic activities reflect our commitment to provide Chinese medical healthcare services to populations in need throughout the Austin area.

Cureville at the Kerrville Folk Festival

In our Cureville clinic, interns camp for three weekends in May and treat the staff, volunteers, and musicians of the Kerrville Folk Festival. Because services are offered miles away from other care facilities, Cureville is often likened to a rural urgent care clinic. Interns treat acute conditions like joint sprains and sun stroke, hone their emergency referral skills, and integrate their services with other holistic healthcare providers.

To learn more about clinical education at AOMA, visit www.aoma.edu/academics/clinical-training/

For more information about job placement rates and program costs, please visit www.aoma.edu/prospective-students/masters-program